

Following an interview by “PM Network”, the PMI official magazine; Omar Zein of Projectize was quoted and referenced in the article: “Inside Track” which addresses career progression from project to program management.

The article illustrates various opinions and suggestions from established professionals in the field. It also argues the pros and cons of promoting an internal project manager to the position of program manager rather than recruit externally.

Omar who has previously written and lectured on the roles and responsibilities of the program manager, states in the article:

“Whereas a project manager must be competent in various technical skills— managing and coordinating resources to achieve a product or service—a program manager must go further to understand how the outcome of the program will benefit the organizational strategy, and manage it from that very perspective ” Mr. Zein says.

»Many organizations believe that program management is mainly about managing a group of projects or one massive project.
